

Reading Response Maze

When you read a text, you draw on your own experience and knowledge to understand what the author means (Outcome). You identify both what the text says directly and what it suggests between the lines (Outcome). You think about why characters make the choices they do, what the story's main idea is, and how the writer's style shapes the mood and meaning (Outcome, Outcome). This maze challenges you to trace a path while thinking about how readers respond to texts in different ways and what makes a text work.

How to play
